

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A vibration dampening system for a seat in a vehicle includes a seat adapted to be coupled to the vehicle. A component is coupled to the seat and has a primary function related to use of the seat. The component is decoupled from the seat in at least one direction such that the component is able to move relative to the seat, thereby having a second function related to dampening vibration in the seat.